Unlock the Secrets of the Winter Woods!

Animal tracking is a fascinating way to learn about the natural world. Through tracking, we can have our very own guided tour through the Eastern woodlands, led by the animals themselves!

With an observant eye, and a bit of patience, we can learn from the animals and discover what they like to eat and where, how they interact with the landscape, plants and trees, and other animals. You will never look at the woods the same way again, once the patterns of animal tracks and trails begin to emerge.

The Mason Road Park and Trout Brook area in Holden, Massachusetts is an area with woods, open fields, and a stream — a nice patchwork of habitat types, which promises to host numerous species of wildlife.

Be sure to dress very warmly in layers, with good hats and gloves, as we may be standing and sitting on the snow. Bring water, a ruler or measuring tape, a sketch pad and pen/pencil, and if you wish, a camera. Most importantly, bring a spirit of adventure and curiosity!
